

Cruel Sister 2.0

am C G em
There was a company at Berkley Square.

C am C am
- Lay the bent to the bonnie broom -

G hm em
Two lovely sisters laboured there.

am G em am
- Fa la la la la la la la la -

As one grew dark as it's the night,
the younger bleached her hair all bright.

As one worked hard to earn her bread,
the younger shared the owner's bed.

He told her she was his only love,
but made the other head of staff.

The younger said: »That cannot be!
The chief clerk's desk was meant for me!«

She told her sister: »O lucky you!
Your office has a lovely view.«

Then, with her sister by her side, walked to the window opened wide.

As they stood there, that blond-bleached lout,
she threw her elder sister out.

She watched her sister float the air
And hit the ground at Berkley Square.

»Your job and office will be mine!«
She got them both, which was all fine.

Two kids did walk along the town
And saw the maiden falling down.

Her corpse was stiffening, growing hard.
They robbed her of her credit card.

The went into a Comtech™ store
And bought computer stuff and more.

Then they wrote software which was great,
made all of Windows™' glory fade.

It was bought by the sister's company and got installed on her PC.

But as she switched her computer on,
the printer printed all alone.

First page in blue these words did show:
THE CHIEF CLERK DID HER SISTER THROW.

The second page, in letters red said: SOON THE MURDERESS WILL BE DEAD.

Third page said NOW!, all printed black.
The murderess fell and broke her neck.
- Fa la la la la la la la laaaaa -