

Twilight Self (Keadran's Song)

am G em
My father's born to darkness, my mother's born to light.
G em am em
They met and soon they found their hearts to one another tied.
am G
My father chose the way of light, rebelled against his role.
am G C G am em am
His love for us was strong, but then dark powers took his soul...
am G em E
Light is black and shadow's bright -
am C G
am I darkness, am I light?
Am C G am
For white magic I will fight,
C am em am
though it kills my darker side.

When Mother died, I had no kin, an orphan, all alone
into a world of strangers who would hate I was thrown.
So I set out upon the road that through the hills did wind, some luck, some joy, some peace, some light, a goddess for to find.
Light is black and shadow's bright -
am I darkness, am I light?
For white magic I will fight,
though it kills my darker side.

I feel the darkness rise in me, my powers want to grow.
With all my will and strength and light I force them to stay low.
But when I'm treated violently or get into a rage,
my will will break, my grip will fail - my magic breaks its cage ...
Light is black and shadow's bright -
am I darkness, am I light?
For white magic I will fight,
though it kills my darker side.

I'll lose my mind, but still I must deny my twilight self.
There is no name for what I am - a light-and-darkness-elf.
O could the goddess heal my soul, allow me to be free - pray is it her I wish to find, or do I look for me?
Light is black and shadow's bright -
am I darkness, am I light?
For white magic I will fight,
though it kills my darker side.
